AUTHORHOUSE, United States, 2006. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 200 x 128 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. One hundred years earlier, Rome experienced a severe drought. The disenchanted Pope lay dying. He briefly thought of his illegitimate child and expressed his regret for not having seen the church at San Ignacio. A cardinal noticed a large mole below the dying Pope s navel. A hundred years later, in the town of San Ignacio, another severe drought was advancing. It cut the town off from the rest of the world. The mayor decided to become oblivious of the calamity. He buried himself in erotic novels and continued to indulge in his pathological passion for mayonnaise. The priest regretted that he was no longer able to travel to the brothel to seminally carry out his mercy mission. After having contracted syphilis, Father Gabriel was sent to take up the post in San Ignacio in order to avoid scandal. He was expected to die soon; but the local doctor cured him of his ailment by applying magic. Because of the mounting dead from the drought, a burial solution was sought for, urgently. The mayor was forced into action after a corpse had been propelled into his courtyard. He ordered the undertaker to come up with an answer. The undertaker began to cremate the dead on burning funeral boats floating down the river. The priest sought solace in a woman who noticed the large mole below his navel. When the woman found that she was pregnant, she forcefully married the pharmacist. The priest s love-child then left town, only to return years later to reveal it all. Not even the priest himself knew that he was the Pope re-incarnated, fulfilling a wish that had died with him a century earlier. But they all...
