Excerpt: . Quasimodo, nevertheless, looked in from time to time on the succeeding days. She strove as much as she could to conceal her aversion when he brought her the basket of provisions or the pitcher of water; but he was sure to perceive the slightest movement of that kind, and then he went sorrowfully away. One day he came just at the moment when she was fondling Djali. For a while he stood full of thought before the graceful group of the goat and the Egyptian. At length, DEGREES shaking his huge, misshapen ead: My misfortune, said* he, is that I am too much like a human creature. Would to God that I had been a downright beast, like that goat! She cast on him a look of astonishment. Oh! he replied to that look-- well do I know why, and immediately retired. Another...
